If everyone in America named Smith formed their own state, it would be the 35th most populous state in America. Let that sink in. And while our country and a number of other English-speaking nations have an abundance of Smiths, every country in the world has its own ubiquitous name, where it seems like you're never in a class, workplace, or on any list without 10 other people having the same name. To find that name in every country in the world, NetCredit took a look at data from Ancestry.com and Oxford reference, and found not only the most popular surname in each nation but also what they all mean. The answers below are far more interesting than you might think — and will definitely make you a bar trivia god this weekend. Editor's Note: For concision's sake, we've only broken down the etymology of each name once, at its first inclusion, and added other fun facts when appropriate as the name comes up again. Countries that belong to two continents are grouped under according to map representation. This list also excludes territories. Photo: NetCredit Antigua and Barbuda Joseph Family name derived from the Hebrew name "Yosef," meaning "May God have another son." One of three Caribbean islands where this is the most common name. Bahamas Rolle Like many Caribbean surnames, Rolle is taken from a European name passed on to enslaved people from early colonizers. This one is the Middle High German rolle, which, much like it does today, means "list" or "roster." It may have referred to someone who worked as a scribe. Barbados Clarke Taken from Olde English clerc, which means "priest." May have denoted a religious clerk or scribe. Belize Martinez Derived from the Latin name Martinus, a reference to Mars, the Roman god of fertility and war. Canada Smith Occupational name for someone who works with metal. Costa Rica Rodriguez Derived from the Germanic word hrōdrīc, which is a compound of hrōd — meaning "renown" — and rīc, meaning "power." Cuba Rodriguez Five countries have Rodriguez as their most popular name, the most of any in Latin America. Dominica Joseph Dominican Republic Rodriguez El Salvador Hernandez Related to "Fernandez," which is derived from Ferdinand, an Old German combination of farð — meaning "journey" — and nanð — meaning "courage" or "daring." Collectively, it translates to "bold voyager." Literally "son of Hernando" or "son of Fernando." Meaning Fernandez and Hernandez are almost the same name. Grenada Charles French form of the Germanic word carl, which means "man." Guatemala Lopez Means "wolf." Haiti Jean French for John, which like Johannes means "God has favored me with a son," or "bless this child." Honduras Hernandez Jamaica Brown This term refers to physical appearance, specifically someone with brown hair and/or complexion. Mexico Hernandez Over 4.8 million Mexicans have this last name, a full 1.3 million more than second-place Garcia. Nicaragua Lopez One in 27 people in Nicaragua have this wolf-meaning name. Panama Rodriguez St. Kitts and Nevis Williams Derived from William, which is a combination of the Germanic will, meaning "want" or "desire," and helm, meaning "helmet." St. Lucia Joseph St. Vincent and the Grenadines Williams Trinidad and Tobago Mohammed A reference to the great Islamic prophet, which in Arabic also means "praiseworthy." Trinidad and Tobago is the only Caribbean nation where the most popular surnames are Arabic, with Mohammed and Ali ranking first and second. United States Smith Nearly 3 million Americans are named Smith, followed closely by Johnson with 2.3 million and Williams with 1.9 million. Rounding out the American top 10 are Brown; Jones; Miller; Davis; Wilson; Anderson; and Taylor. Photo: NetCredit Argentina Gonzalez This literally means "son of Gonzalo," and though you don't meet a lot of Gonzalos walking around these days, back in medieval times you did meet a good number of Gundisalvus'. This was a Latin version of a Germanic name combining the words gund — meaning "war" — and salv, with a meaning that's unclear. So, to summarize, Gonzalez means "son of war." Bolivia Mamani Refers to someone who came from the Spanish town of Miaman, which is present-day Ourense. One could draw the conclusion that many Spanish settlers in Bolivia came from that region. Brazil da Silva Means someone from a number of places called Silva, which means "thicket" or "bramble." Chile Gonzalez Colombia Rodriguez Ecuador Garcia Its exact origin is unclear though the name dates to medieval times and is likely related to a Basque word meaning either "young" or "bear." Guyana Persaud West Indian alteration of Indian name Prasad, from the Sanskrit prasada, meaning "favor," "grace," or "offering." Paraguay Gonzalez Peru Quispe From Aymara word for "glass" or "precious stone." Suriname Lin From a Chinese root word for "forest." Uruguay Rodriguez Venezuela Gonzalez Photo: NetCredit Albania Hoxha Derived from a Persian word khvajeh, which means "lord." Andorra Garcia This independent country sandwiched between France and Spain has more Spanish-leaning names. Armenia Gregoryan The most common name in Armenia is taken from the proper name Grigor, from the Greek Gregorios — meaning "to be awake" or "watchful." Austria Gruber Austria's most common name is taken from the Middle High German word groube, which means "pit" or "hollow." Basically it refers to one who lives in a depression, hollow, or other lowered area. Belarus Ivanov Means "son of Ivan." Belgium Peeters Taken from the name Petrus, which means "rock" or "stone." Bosnia and Herzegovina Hodžić This name taken from the word hoza means "son of the lord" or "son of the master." Its root is from the Persian word khawaja, meaning "lord" or "master." Bulgaria Ivanov One of three countries where the most common name is a descendant of Ivan. Croatia Horvat Taken from Croatian word hrvat, which means "person from Croatia." This would be like if the most common name here was actually Johnny America. Cyprus Georgiou If you've traveled the rural countryside of this Mediterranean island then it's not much surprise its most common name means "rustic" or "farmer." Czech Republic Novakova When the most common name in your country comes from a Slavic word for "newcomer," it must get confusing to know who has actually lived there a while. Denmark Jensen Shortened version of "son of Johannes." Johannes is a version of John, Jean, and other variants, which means "Jehovah has favored me with a son" or "God bless this child." Estonia Tamm Means "oak tree" or "dam." Finland Korhonen Gotta love those playful Finns, whose most common surname comes from the word korho, which literally means "deaf person" but is also used to describe someone who is clumsy, silly, or foolish. France Martin Like Martinez, this name is derived from Mars, the Roman god of war and fertility. Germany Müller Also Mueller, referring to one who mills grain. Any surprise this country's good at beer? Greece Papadopoulos Combination of papas, which means "priest" in Greek, and poulus, which means "son." So we can assume Greek priests were not a celibate order. Hungary Nagy Hungarian word for "big," referring to a large or powerful person. Iceland Jónsdóttir Fairly self-explanatory if you read it out loud, this means "daughter of John" in Icelandic. Ireland Murphy No surprise as this is also the most common name for any American bar that offers two-for-one shots of Jameson, Murphy comes from the Gaelic name Ó Murchadha, meaning "descendant of Murchadh," a personal name meaning "sea-warrior." Italy Rossi Interesting to see the most common name of stereotypically dark-haired, olive-skinned Italians refers to a person with red hair and a ruddy complexion. Kosovo Krasniqi A descendant from the Krasniqi tribe of northern Albania. Latvia Bērziņš Related to bērzs, the Latvian word for birch trees, this literally means "one who lives among birch trees." Liechtenstein Büchel From the Middle High German bühel — which loosely translates to "hill" — this name refers to someone living on a hill. Lithuania Kazlauskas Name related to the familiarly-Polish Kozlowski, it literally means someone from any number of places called Kozłów. Luxembourg Schmit Middle High German version of Schmidt — or Smith. Literally, it's the "Smith" of Luxembourg. Macedonia Stojanovski The "Stojanov" part of the name is of unknown Macedonian origin, but the "ski" suffix is the result of the government's effort to make names sound more Greek. Malta Borg Old Norse word meaning "fortification" or "fort." Moldova Rusu Refers to a person of Russian descent, like Ruski. Monaco Rossi One family can tip the scales in Monaco, as the 89 Rossis could be easily overtaken by the Lorenzis, who number 67. Montenegro Popovic Not a nation of die-hard Spurs fans, this name is a mixture of the Serbian word for priest, pop, and the suffix "ovich," which means "son of." Netherlands de Jong Dutch name meaning "young." Norway Hansen Old Norse word meaning "creators of annoyingly catchy songs." Or it's a derivative of Hans, which is an aphetic form of Johannes. Poland Nowak Derived from the Polish word nowy, meaning "new." Denotes a newcomer or someone new to the area. Portugal Silva This is close to the most popular name in Brazil too, meaning "person from a thicket." Romania Popa From Romanian word popa, meaning "priest." San Marino Gasperoni From the Latin word gasparus, which comes from the Persian word kaspar, meaning "treasurer." Serbia Jovanovic Meaning "son of Jovan," another of the Jean/John/Johannes family. Slovakia Varga From the Hungarian word for "cobbler" or "shoemaker." Slovenia Novak From Slavic word for "new," meaning one is a newcomer. Spain Garcia Almost 1.5 million people in Spain have this name from a Basque word for "bear." Sweden Andersson Meaning son of Anders, which is ultimately derived from the Greek andreios, meaning "manly." Switzerland Müller Turkey Yilmaz Turkish name meaning "unyielding." Ukraine Melnik Russian occupational name for miller, or one who works with grain. United Kingdom Smith Guessing there were a LOT of people working with metal in old-timey England. Vatican City Bachmann Exactly four people with this name live in Vatican City. If one more Graf moves in, it'll drop to #2. Photo: NetCredit Algeria Saidi Ancestral name and derivative of the word sayyid, which means "lord" or "master." Angola Manuel Manuel is short for Emmanuel, which if you paid attention to all those Christmas carols you may recall as Immanuel — Hebrew for "God is with us." Benin Bio Unknown. Botswana Molefe The father of the Batlôkwa tribe — found in Botswana, Lesotho, and South Africa — was named Modungwane. This name is thought to be from its commonly-used shortened version, Molefe. Burkina Faso Ouedraogo A little like how immigration officials at Ellis Island shaped American surnames in the 20th century, so did the French in their former African colonies. This name is a French spelling of Wedraogo, son of Princess Yennega, the mother of the Mossi people. Burundi Nkurunziza Bantu name meaning "good news." Cameroon Ngo Proto-Indo-European word meaning "ox" or "bull." Cape Verde Lopes From the medieval word lopo, which means "wolf." Lopes itself is Portuguese, stemming from Cape Verde's time as a colony of Portugal. Central African Republic Moussa Variant of Musa, a reference to Moses. Chad Mahamat African variant of Mohammad. Comoros Mohamed Côte d'Ivoire (Ivory Coast) Kone Unknown. Democratic Republic of the Congo Ilunga A highly-efficient Bantu word meaning "a person who is ready to forgive any abuse for the first time, to tolerate it a second time, but never a third time." Djibouti Mohamed Egypt Mohamed Equatorial Guinea Nguema Eritrea Ali The name referring to the all-high was also the name of Ali IbnAbi Talib, the cousin and son-in-law of the prophet Mohammed. eSwatini (formerly Swaziland) Dlamini A fifth of the country has this name relating to the Dlamini people. Ethiopia Tesfaye Taken from tesfa, which means "my hope" in Amharic. Gabon Ndong Unknown. The tenth-most popular name here? Obame. The Gambia Jallow Fula name that comes from the Arabic word jalil, "meaning greatness." Ghana Mensah Name for the third-born child in Akan, a language native to Ghana. Guinea Diallo Another French colonial spelling of a native name, this Fula name means "bold." Guinea-Bissau Gomes Taken from the Visigoth name "Guma," which means "man." Kenya Mwangi Means "rapid expansion" in Kikuyu. Lesotho Mohapi Sotho word for "victor" or "champion." Liberia Kollie Distantly derived from Old Norse word kollir, meaning "helmet." Libya Ali Madagascar Rakotomalalav Rakoto is actually quite common in Malagasy surnames, with the three most popular beginning with this prefix, and four of the top 10. This version is blended with the word malawi, which means "beloved." All 10 of the most popular names begin with the letter R, which probably makes alphabetizing in Madagascar a nightmare. Malawi Banda Forgive Malawians if they have a bit of an ego, but when your most common name literally translates to "I am a gift from God," it can be hard to stay humble. Malawi's first prime minister was named Hastings Banda, and as it is customary in this part of Africa to have surnames that speak to life aspirations, he may also be responsible for much of its popularity. Mali Traore Originally this name was something more along the lines of "Tarawele," a Manding word meaning "the called ones," referring to calls to battle. But when French colonizers began writing it down, the name took on this form. Mauritania Ba A couple of possibilities here: First, it could be a Fula prefix denoting where someone comes from, like Ba-Sudan. But it could also be a shortened form of aba, the Arabic word for father. Mauritius Beeharry Sadly, this is not a last name that excuses its owners from body hair maintenance, nor is it a reference to a furry insect. Rather it comes from the Sanskrit word vihara, which means "one who roams about for pleasure." Morocco Alaoui This is essentially the same as Ali, but a French transcription. Mozambique Langa Bantu word meaning "sun" or "light." Namibia Johannes German derivative of John. Niger Abdou Derived from the Arabic abduh, which means "his servant." Though in this case the "him" is Allah. Nigeria Ibrahim Arabic for Abraham, the father of all Semitic peoples. Republic of the Congo Ngoma Means "song," "drum," or the song made by beating a drum. Rwanda Uwimana Rwandan origin meaning "daughter of God." Sao Tome and Principe Fernandes Literally is "son of Fernando," though that name is taken from the Gothic name Frithunanths. Broken down it's "frith," which means "peace with," and "nanth" which means "daring." Senegal Ndiaye From Arabic nadīy, meaning "generous." Seychelles Hoareau You can credit Rene Hoareau, one of the first French settlers in the Seychelles, with the popularity of this name. Sierra Leone Kamara Derived from the Aribic word qamar, meaning "moon." Somalia Ali Combined with Abdi, the second-most popular name in Somalia, about 1.9 million of Somalia's 14.74 million people have some derivative of a name meaning "all high" or "lofty." South Africa Nkosi Means "god" or "king." South Sudan Deng It's no coincidence in the tropical climate of South Sudan, the Dinki people's most powerful god is Deng, the god of rain. Sudan Ahmed Alternate spelling of Ahmad, a word meaning "most praised" in reference to the prophet Mohammed. It's also the second- or third-most popular name in a number of Islamic countries. Tanzania Juma Derived from the Arabic word jum'a, which means "assembly." The name is often given to people born on Friday, the "day of assembly" in Islam. Togo Lawson Literally means "son of Lawrence," but proliferated in Togo due to the slave trade. Tunisia Trabelsi Refers to people from Tripoli in Libya. Pronounced "trablus" in Maghrebi Arabic. Uganda Akello A term from the Luo people meaning a child born after twins. Zambia Phiri This is the name of a clan from the Chewa people, who inhabit central and southern Africa. Zimbabwe Moyo Zimbabwean name meaning "the heart." Photo: NetCredit Afghanistan Muhammadi A derivative of Mohammad. Azerbaijan Mammadova Means "son of Mammad." Bahrain Ali From the Arabic Al-Ali, which means "all high." It can also mean "lofty" or "sublime," and is a reference to Allah, the almighty god in Islam. Bangladesh Akter A variant on the Arabic word akhtar, meaning "star" or "good luck." Ironic for a country that seems to never catch a break. Brunei Haji Reference to one who has made the hajj, or Islamic pilgrimage to Mecca. Cambodia Sok The word means "thick rope or chain" in Cantonese, but may also refer to people from Suo, a Chinese state during the Shang dynasty. China Wang If you thought that Smith stat in the intro was crazy, if everyone in China named Wang formed a country it would be the 14th most-populous in the world, right between the Philippines and Egypt. Over 103 million people share this name that means prince, king, or vast. Georgia Beridze Unknown. India Devi From Sanskrit word for "goddess." Indonesia Sari Indonesian word for "essence." Iran Mohammadi Iraq Mohamed Israel Cohen From the Hebrew kohen, meaning priest. This referred mostly to the kohanim caste of priests, descended from Moses' brother Aaron. Japan Sato This denotes a descendant of the Sato family, a branch of the Fujiwara clan dating back to the ninth century. Jordan Allah Kazakhstan Kim Translates to "gold." Kuwait Ali Kyrgyzstan Ismailova From the Uyghur name for Ismael, the son of Abraham, whose name means "God will hear." The -ova suffix makes this "son of Ismael." Laos Inthavong Unknown Laotian term. Lebanon El Din Combination of Arabic words el — meaning "god" — and din — meaning religion or faith. So, effectively, this means "god faith" or "faith in "god." Malaysia Tan Refers to people from the Zhou dynasty-era state of Tan. Maldives Mohamed Mongolia Ganbold Just when you thought Mongolia couldn't get any more badass, you learn the most common name in the country means steel. Myanmar Maung Burmese term of honor for a younger brother. Nepal Caudhari Sanskrit word meaning "holder of four," which may refer to the amount of land someone owns. North Korea Kim A full 25 percent of North Koreans have this last name, which is a reference to "gold." Oman Al Balushi Al Balushi is not the long lost third member of a great Chicago comedy family, but rather a tribal surname meaning someone is of Baloch ancestry. Pakistan Khan From Turkish word meaning "ruler" or "nobleman." You're yelling it like William Shatner in your head right now, aren't you? Palestine Awad Based on Arabic word for reverence or kindness. Philippines de la Cruz Filipino take on the French name "de la Croix," which means "of the cross." Pacquiao did not crack the top 10. Yet. Qatar Khan Just when you'd gotten Captain Kirk out of your head… Russia Ivanova Saudi Arabia Khan Singapore Tan Over 723,000 people, or one in eight Singaporeans, has this name from the Tan state of the Zhou dynasty. South Korea Kim Over 11 million, or one in five, South Koreans are named Kim. Sri Lanka Perera From the Portuguese word pereira, meaning "palm tree." Syria Khaled From the Arabic word khalid, meaning "eternal" or "remaining." Taiwan Chen Refers to people from the Chen region, in Henan province. Tajikistan Sharipov Literally means "son of Sharip," which is a Tajik version of Sharif. Who, as you may recall, don't like it. Thailand Saetang Thai variation of Chen, the most popular name in a number of other Asian countries referring to people from Chen in the Henan province. Timor-Leste (East Timor) Soares From Portueguese word soeiro, meaning "swineherd." Turkmenistan Mamedova Means "son of Mammad." United Arab Emirates Ali Of the seven countries where Ali or some form of it is the most popular surname, this is the only one with an indoor ski slope. Uzbekistan Karimov Unknown. Vietnam Nguyen Vietnamese version of the Chinese word ruan, which is a type of lute. Yemen Mohamed That's over 10 countries, if you were counting, where some version of Mohamed is the most popular name. 05_The-most-common-last-name-in-every-country_NorthAmerica Australia Smith Smith, to exactly no one's surprise, is the most common name in five countries, which also happen to be the largest majority of English-speaking countries in the world. Fiji Kumar From the Sanskrit kumara, which means "son," "child," or "prince." Prince of a white castle, perhaps? Kiribati Ioane Member of the John/Jean/Johannes family of etymology. Marshall Islands John Same as Jean, Johannes, and other versions of the "blessed with a son" name. Micronesia Mori From a Japanese word for "forest," that more specifically means the hallowed ground around a shrine. Nauru Harris Derived from the English name Harry, which is a combination of the Germanic word haim, which means "home." And rīc, meaning "power" or "ruler." New Zealand Smith Palau Tellei This island nation of just over 21,000 only has seven last names with over 400 people. The origin of this most-popular one is unknown. Papua New Guinea John The two next most popular surnames here are Peter and Paul, and the entire top 10 are English names of biblical origin. Samoa Meredith Taken from the Welsh name Maredudd, a combination of words meaning "pomp" and "lord." Solomon Islands Mae Japanese for "front" or "before." Tonga Latu About 2,700 Tongans have this native name of unknown meaning. Tuvalu Apinelu Technically, this tied with Smith for most popular name in this small Pacific island nation. But really, don't we have enough Smiths on this list? Vanuatu Tari Native name of unknown origin beat out yet-another John by 1,400 people.
